CANNERY BUSY WITH SEASON'S "PACK"

Haiku Straining Every Nerve to Finish Work of Canning
100,000 Cases.

WAILUKU, August 30.—The Haiku Packing Company's plant is wonderfully active these days. Three hundred busy laborers are hustling and bustling to pare, remove the cores, slice, cook and can over one hundred thousand cases of pineapples. It is a big work and the machine-like precision with which the work goes on is worthy of a large sugar company's mill. And when it is remembered that for years the sugar people have been perfecting their systems, the compliment is obvious.

The cannery is working at top speed to take care of all the pines that are gathered from the fields, and every nerve is strained to keep up with the rush from the adjoining plantations.

The cannery is well able to can pines and the by-products of the fruit, and also to make the cans. The cases that the cans are packed in are also made at the cannery and it is most interesting to take a look over the whole plant.

The pines that are raised at Haiku are much smaller than those grown on Oahu, but the Maui pines are sweeter and have less fiber than those of Oahu. The very latest type of pineapple machinery has been introduced into the Haiku cannery and it is wonderful to notice how, as the necessity arose, the different machines were invented. The pining machines are wonders, and they remove just the right amount of skin. The core-removing apparatus is a simple yet wonderful machine that punches the core out of each pineapple. The pine is then ready for the slicing machine and, here again, is the inventor seen at his best. The pines are thrust into a concave grip and instantly a set of knives plunge into the fruit and slice them just the required thickness.

The sliced pines of assorted sizes are then placed in cans and start on a long journey—per automatic carrier—to the lid sealers, the juice distributors, the bidders and eventually the label department. The whole plant works like clockwork and there is no doubt that the pineapple industry is running second to sugar as the principal industry of the Islands.

NEW INDUSTRY IN FULL SWING

A Real "Poor Man's" Occupation
Provided by Algaroba Mill
Opening.

A new industry has suddenly arisen in our midst, a poor man's industry, which requires no capital. This is the algaroba bean picking industry, at which even a lazy man can earn a dollar a day and in which women and children can assist materially at keeping the wolf from the door. Those who have awakened to the industry and are literally picking up money these days are to be seen on almost every street of the city, lugging bags along and darting back and forth after the yellow source of wealth.

There are on this island at the present time, according to the calculations of those with the data at hand upon which to calculate, fifty thousand tons of algaroba beans, ready to be ground up into the best balanced cattle food known to science. On the corner of Queen street and Iwilei road, ground has been broken for the erection of a new algaroba mill, with a capacity for grinding eight tons a day, while stored away in warehouses waiting for the mill to begin grinding are the bags of beans that have been gathered during the past two or three weeks and brought in at the rate of between five and six hundred bags a day.

The Algaroba Feed Company pays twelve and a half cents a bag for the beans and at that figure there are bean gatherers earning from one to two and a half dollars a day, with children picking up four to six bits to add to the family funds. These beans are delivered at the twenty-five purchasing stations about the city and are paid for with cash. Every day the auto truck of the company makes the rounds of the stations and brings the beans into the store rooms. All up and down the railroad line are bean gatherers, who ship their pickings up in freight, while every Japanese stage which rolls into town brings from five to twenty bags as excess baggage.

Altogether, the new industry is putting money into circulation among those who need it most.

The promoters of the Algaroba Feed Company expect to receive hearty support in their work of turning to good account what has heretofore been, to a very large extent, waste material. When it is considered that the federal experiment station officials here and at Washington have pronounced ground algaroba beans an ideal fodder and that Hawaii imports oats and barley to the value of a million dollars a year, the expectation of the company does not seem misplaced. When Hawaii can furnish a better cattle and horse food than can be imported, and when the money spent for this local product is kept right at home, local stockmen and horsemen should be able to see the advantage of patronizing the algaroba mill to the full limit of its output.

DIFFERENT GAMER.

It was a very angry fan
Who for the umpteenth time
And belittled the latter fan:
"You ought to be punched!"

The game went on; they tied the score
Whereat this rooster bawled:

And ought to be recalled!"

Oh, voters, we must play the game;
The rules we cannot mix.
Remember, ball is not the same
As current politics.
